Adapting and developing Report Template for personality study office

1. Terre des hommes Iraq – Access to Justice Program

Tdh is a leading Swiss child rights agency present in the MENA region since 1973. Currently, Tdh operates in Lebanon, Jordan, Egypt, Palestine, and Iraq. Afghanistan and Pakistan belong programmatically and operationally to the MENA portfolio at Tdh as well. Within the region, Tdh has in place 3 specialized programs: (1) Access to Justice for Children and Youth, within which a 'Gender Justice' specialized programmatic thematic is carried out, (2) Children and Youth Affected by Migration, and (3) Child and Maternal Health. Those programs, in addition to the specialized technical staff within each of them, are supported by a Child Protection Transversal Unit as well as a Quality and Accountability Unit.

More information can be found here: <https://www.tdh.ch/en>

Since January 2019, Tdh has been a pioneering actor in justice for children programming in Iraq. Within the current Access to Justice program, Tdh aims at promoting justice practices which incorporates a restorative component as to provide appropriate solutions to (re)establish the concept of positive and child-friendly justice among offenders, victims, witnesses and their communities, but also towards the stakeholders in country, from authorities to national civil society involved in child justice matters. The complementary objectives are to ensure (1) the application of strong legal principles such as specialized justice systems for children, diversion and alternatives to detention, (2) the best interest of the child at all stages of the judicial procedures including post-release/aftercare, (3) psychological, sociological and criminological theories that take into account the comprehensive development of children and youth, (4) the setting up of safe and effective reintegration pathways from the first contact with the justice systems till long after their release in order to ensure the continuum of care, sustainability and minimize the risks related to re-offending/recidivism.

Tdh activities mainly focus on: providing specialized support to foster safe and sustainable reintegration processes for children in contact with the law and their families, reinforcing the child justice system through promoting their access to child-friendly legal aid, fostering synergies between formal and informal justice actors, reinforcing child protection community-based mechanisms, and providing specialized capacity building to juvenile judges pertaining to different stages/practices of child justice proceedings.

2. Rationale of the consultancy

The legal system in Iraq puts children and youth at a disadvantage as the domestic legal framework is not fully aligned with the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the principles of justice for children. Despite being a signatory to the CRC, Iraq fails to adequately protect children from violence, abuse, and neglect and ensure humane treatment and respect for their dignity during detention. By addressing these issues and implementing appropriate reforms, Iraq can work towards providing a system of justice that safeguards the rights and well-being of children and youth, preventing further violations and offering them opportunities for a brighter and more secure future.

In close consultation with UNICEF's Child Protection Unit, Tdh will develop a comprehensive training program specifically tailored for the social service workforce in juvenile facilities. Through this consultancy, Tdh aims to enhance the existing reporting template for the personality study office within the juvenile court system in Iraq, driven by the necessity to align with international standards and best practices. The adapted/developed template will ensure compliance with global conventions, such as the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), emphasizing the integration of legal and ethical considerations crucial to the juvenile justice system. The proposed enhancement focuses on improving information gathering to achieve a more comprehensive understanding of a juvenile's background, mental health, and social environment. This, in turn, will facilitate the development of targeted rehabilitation plans, contributing to well-informed court decisions and the successful reintegration of juveniles into society. In close collaboration with diverse stakeholders in the juvenile justice system, the consultancy aims to deliver a user-friendly and standardized reporting tool. Furthermore, the consultancy commits to ongoing improvement within a specified timeframe, employing an on-the-job training approach, and incorporating periodic reviews by experts to adapt the reporting based on emerging field best practices. The final version will seek approval from the high judicial council and relevant departments for official usage.

3. Objective of the consultancy

Under this consultancy, Tdh seeks the services of a national expert or a group of experts to adapt and develop the personality study office's reporting template. The primary focus is on the key actors involved in the judicial proceeding with juveniles as well as the social workforce. The national expert or team of experts will work closely and collaboratively with the Tdh team, the High Judicial Council MoJ/MOLSA/Mol, and UNICEF.

The scope of the work includes elevating the reporting template for the personality study office within Iraq's juvenile court system. Central to this effort is the initiation of a comprehensive literature review that will encompass all global initiatives related to initiating, developing, or adapting reporting templates for personality studies of juveniles and children who are in conflict with the law. This entails a thorough examination of lessons learned and best practices in the field, drawing upon international experiences to inform and enrich the enhancement of the reporting template. Primarily, the consultancy seeks to align the reporting template with international standards, particularly the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), with the overarching goal of enhancing the juvenile justice system's adherence to global best practices. Ensuring strict compliance with legal and ethical considerations, the objective is to develop an adapted or new reporting template that upholds the rights and wellbeing of juveniles. The enhancement will focus on improving information gathering, providing a more comprehensive understanding of a juvenile's background, mental health, and social environment, with an emphasis on factors contributing to delinquent behavior. This detailed assessment is designed to facilitate the development of targeted rehabilitation plans, contributing to better informed court decisions and the successful reintegration of juveniles into society. Collaborating closely with diverse stakeholders in the juvenile justice system is another key objective, ensuring the reporting template meets the needs of professionals involved and fostering a collaborative, multidisciplinary approach. Additionally, the consultancy aims to transform the reporting template into a user-friendly and standardized tool, streamlining the assessment process and ensuring consistency in personality study evaluations. A commitment to continuous improvement is embedded in the objectives, with an on the job training approach for professionals and periodic reviews by experts to adapt the template to emerging research and field best practices.

Scope of the consultancy and deliverables

The scope of work is to adapt and enhance the reporting template for Personality Study Offices. This involves a comprehensive literature review focused on initiatives related to the initiation or development/adaptation of such templates. Additionally, a review of global best practices in personality studies for the rehabilitation and reintegration of juveniles and children in conflict with the law will be conducted. The consultancy will commence with an inception report, summarizing findings from a desk review of existing tools and SOPs, including recommended best practices, drafts of proposed data collection tools, and a detailed work plan. Subsequently, Focus Group Discussions and interviews with key actors, complemented by a quantitative questionnaire, will be undertaken. Tdh lead will accompany and facilitate this process. A needs assessment of major stakeholders involved in rehabilitation and reintegration, specifically regarding capacity building and the implementation of the new reporting template, will be carried out. The consultancy will also encompass facilitating workshops for the development or review of the adapted reporting template, coupled with on the job training for staff responsible for its utilization. The final phase involves working on developing the capabilities of relevant stakeholders to endorse the adapted reporting template within their respective departments. Through these concerted efforts, the consultancy aims to align the reporting template with international standards and contextual needs, thereby enhancing its effectiveness in inform the decision of the juvenile judges.
